County Citizen of the Year named

BY RICHARD MEEK
Long-time Waveland businesswoman and carnival captain Elaine Colson was named Citizen of the Year at the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce's annual banquet Friday night at the Our Lady of the Gulf Community Center. Colson is one of the founders of the Krewe of Nereids, an all-female carnival organization that annually parades in Waveland.

Colson, the former Elaine Lamer, was born in New Orleans. In 1927, her family moved to Waveland when the city boasted a population of 900. Colson attended St. Joseph Academy in Bay St. Louis, where she was captain of the basketball team. She also coached an elementary school team.

She married in 1942 and is the mother of three children. In the late 1960s, Colson opened a floral shop on Coleman Avenue in Waveland. An interest in theater led to expansion of her shop, and into special events, entertainment and decoration. For 15 years, she helped design and stage several elaborate productions in the South. It was in 1966 that Colson

Kingston a fixture for over 50 years

A dollar won't buy much these days, but five will still buy a haircut from Al Kingston.

Located in the building across from the depot where he opened in 1946, Kingston, 74, has been giving the same kind of haircuts for over 50 years.

In addition to operating his own shop, Kingston has cut hair for student boarders and the brothers at St. Stanislaus for the past 50 years too.

to Kingston's comment from the group gathered in the shop on a recent morning.

Lester Hover was in the chair getting a cut while Kingston answered questions.

Hover has known the barber for 40 years and gets his hair cut every three weeks or so.

"I wouldn't let anyone cut my hair but him," Hover said.

Waiting for their haircuts or just there for a visit were Herman Cowan, a friend of 56 years, Clements Killnar

"My style hasn't changed like these style shops...Some of those cuts look like a pot sitting on your head...It used to be that you could go right up the street here and get five loaves of french bread for a quarter...I got my barber's license...I was so happy I came home and got my marriage license..." Al Kingston

"I cut hair every week at St. Stanislaus," he explains. "I go there or they come here."

As if that is not enough to keep him busy, Kingston also goes to homes of customers unable to come to his shop and cuts hair at convalescent homes.

"I don't have too much time off," Kingston jokes.

who has known Kingston for about 15 years and James (Jake) Evans who has known Kingston for 30 years.

When the subject of the price of a haircut comes up, everyone has a comment, especially when it's mentioned that haircuts used to be a quarter.

"Plenty people don't understand about a quarter,"

"If you're bald-headed, it's still $5..." Kingston customer Clements Killnar.

He describes his style as a "regular haircut" with a little bit of tonic to finish off for a nice smell.

"My style hasn't changed like these style shops," Kingston said. "Some of those cuts look like a pot sitting on your head."

A general agreement arose

Kingston says. "It used to be that you could go right up the street here and get five loaves of french bread for a quarter."

When Kingston originally opened his barber shop, a haircut cost 50 cents and a shave around 15 cents.

Stennis concerns heard

BY ED LEPOMA

The giant Stennis Space Center is vying to remain the premiere facility for rocket engine testing, and a crowd of about 50 citizens gathered for a public hearing Wednesday night curious about the future impact.

NASA conducted the hearing at Hancock High School to brief citizens on the proposed testing, and to gather comments for the final draft of an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS).

Stennis is selected and providing Congress approves the funding, NASA officials estimate another investment of over $100 million at Stennis for modifying test stands, expanding monitoring facilities and upgrading other equipment.

Don Magee, NASA's Environmental Officer, said Stennis was designed to last 50 years.

Pass Library on the Internet

BY ED LEPOMA

The Pass Christian Library has embarked on the information highway and with that giant step comes a heavy responsibility.

The Library, located behind City Hall at Heim and Scenic Drive, last week became the first in Harrison, Jackson or Hancock County to offer Internet access to the public. It also has personal computers for use of local citizens and students.

One library was chosen from each of the state's five Congressional Districts to provide Internet access, and each was awarded a $18,500 grant from the state's Department of Commerce. The pilot program, called "Connecting Communities through Technology," enables schools and public libraries in designated areas the ability to gain access to the Internet.

The school districts work through the Mississippi Department of Education in order to develop a direct link to the MDE's state backbone that allows the local library to dial up to the school, offering the Internet, without incurring online charges.

Head Librarian Ann McGraw explained that the link up with MDE will become fully operational within the next couple of months, but in the meantime, the library is working with Datasync, a local Internet provider, to offer the service now.

With Internet access comes responsibility for the provider and the users, McGraw explained. All users wishing to use the Internet will be required to read and sign a "Pass Christian Library Computer Use Guidelines Agreement," and a signed copy will be held at the desk.

"The library doesn't have the staff to censor access to materials or to protect users from materials they may find offensive," said McGraw.

"There will be some resources available on the Internet, which parents may feel are inappropriate for their children, so it is suggested parents monitor their child's use of the Internet at all times. The parents, not the library staff, assume responsibility for deciding what electronic resources are appropriate for their children. Only parents or guardians may restrict their child's use. The library staff will not monitor nor control children's use of the Internet," McGraw said.

McGraw said the library has personal computers offering WordPerfect for Windows and Microsoft Word for word processing and Netscape for Internet browsers.

McGraw said user regulations were drawn up to insure fair access to all and to maximize computer availability to everyone.

Besides signing the guidelines agreement, the following rules will apply, McGraw said. Computers will be available on a first-come, first-served basis, but users must sign in before beginning to use them.

Use of the personal computers is limited to one hour if others are waiting, but there will be no charge to use any of the word processing programs.

Printouts are 10 cents a page, and this includes mistakes and misprints. McGraw recommends alerting someone on the library staff if you experience printing problems.

Internet users will be limited to 30 minutes if others are waiting, and there will be a two-hour limit per day for Internet use. Children and young adults through the 12th year in high school can use the Internet free, but other adults or non-students will be charged a fee of $1 per half hour on the Internet.

McGraw said users may save a file on the hard drive of the computers, but files will be deleted at the beginning of every month.

"The library is not responsible for deleted files," said McGraw. "If you would like a permanent copy, you can bring your own floppy disk or buy one supplied by the library for $1."

Computers will be available at the library from 8 a.m. until 4:45 p.m. Monday through Friday, except on Tuesday, the library stays open until 6:45 p.m. On Saturdays, the library will be open from 9 a.m. until 12:45 p.m.

McGraw said trained staff members will gladly give users basic instructions and advice, but due to scheduling, someone might not always be available.

She advises if you have never used computers or have specific questions about using certain word processing programs, reference books are available.

No-nos for net users

The Pass Christian Library has drawn up some specific no-nos for computer users. Users may not:

-Make any attempt to damage computer equipment or software;

-Make any attempt to alter software configurations;

-Engage in any activity which is deliberately and maliciously offensive, libelous or slanderous;

-Use any library workstation to view or download potentially pornographic or offensive material;

-Install or download any software;

-Participate in any real time "chat rooms;"

-Violate another user's privacy;

Head Librarian Ann McGraw warns, "Violations of any of these rules may result in your being banned permanently from access to the computers. Unlawful activities will be dealt with in a serious and appropriate manner by notifying the proper authorities."

Georgia men face drug charges

BY RICHARD MEEK

Two Georgia men were arrested on drug charges after a routine traffic stop on Interstate 10 on Wednesday.

Arrested were Robert Wisdom, 43, and Keith Hardwick, 28, of Columbus, Ga. Detective Jeff Hair of the Hancock County Narcotics Task Force said the two were charged with possession of marijuana with intent to distribute.

Hair said Hancock County Deputy Tim Broder pulled over a vehicle with Wisdom and Hardwick in it at the Eastbound three-mile marker for a routine traffic stop. He said the stop led to the discovery and seizure of 15 pounds of marijuana and the arrests. Also assisting were Bay St. Louis Patrolman Paul Denham, Deputy Esposito, and the county canine unit.

Wisdom and Hardwick are being held in the Hancock County Justice Facility. Wisdom is also wanted in Oklahoma on drug charges.

Hair is in charge of the investigation.

Last chance

Owners of boats abandoned on Hancock County beaches have one last chance to move them.

Board of Supervisors President Philip Moran said beach crews have tagged the boats, and this week he appealed to owners to claim them and move them or they will be towed away.

Under current law, the Sheriff's Department posts a notice on abandoned boats, and owners are given five days to remove them.

The owner is then given 30 days to claim the boat, and must pay the towing fee and storage fee. If no one claims the boat, the county can auction it off.

"CUEVAS" QUOTES

By Ellis C. Cuevas

Since December 1, the Hancock County Tax Collector's office has been busy collecting the 1996 property and personal taxes.

To avoid a lot of bother, many taxpayers are mailing in checks for their property taxes. This keeps them from having to leave home to take care of the chore.

Those who use the tax collector's office also find the time of waiting to be serviced has really been reduced in recent years.

The property and personal taxes become delinquent after Jan. 31.

The tax office is open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and is located at 161 Main Street, corner of Second Street.

It is also one-stop taxpaying now, as the county collects property and personal taxes for both Bay St. Louis and Waveland.

If you have a question about property and personal taxes, call 467-4425, or 467-1669.

The following is for persons who are new to the area.

Ed Murtagh, tax collector-assessor, reminds new residents and new homeowners that in order to apply for Homestead Exemption they need to visit his office in person between January 1 and April 1.

For further information on Homestead Exemptions, call 467-5727.

It is still time to view the City-County Library's Holiday Gala Tree entries at the main branch, Highway 90 Service Road, Bay St. Louis.

The judges had a hard time making their selections, and as far as I am concerned, every entry, and there were 44 of them, are winners.

The students, various businesses and organizations, all did a fine job in decorating the trees.

The trees will be on display at the library until Dec. 20.

The library's hours on Mondays are 9:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m.; Tuesdays through Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m.; Fridays, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Saturdays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

We at The Echo were saddened by the death of former employee Armand J. Buwe.

Mr. Buwe, a longtime employee in the pressroom and circulation departments, worked until the age of 87, retiring February a year ago.

Upon retirement he moved in with a daughter in Westwego, La.

Personally, I would like to have an entire staff with the work ethics like Mr. Buwe's.

He was always at work one hour ahead of scheduled time in order not to be late. Had to be in the hospital not to show up for work. When there was work to do, we had to urge him to take a break. He worked well with everyone, and everyone really liked him.

To Mr. Buwe's children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren and all family and friends, he was a great person and someone to look up.

He will be remembered for many years by those of us at The Echo who had the opportunity of knowing him and working with him.

Celebrates 92nd today

David Wainwright of Wainwright Street, Waveland celebrates his 92nd birthday today. He was born in the Bayou La Croix community on Dec. 15, 1904. He lived in the Bayou La Croix community until his home was taken by the test site and has been a Waveland resident for 33 years. This photo was taken of Mr. Wainwright in 1986, with his beard, which he shaved off in 1989. He and his wife, Iona Sones Wainwright, have been married for 55 years. He was a sawyer by trade and operated sawmills all the way to the White Mountains in Arizona. He is the only survivor of his family of three brothers and five sisters, who all lived in Hancock County.

An early glance at some of the key issues in the 1997 Legislative Session

Editor's note: This is the second in a three-part series of articles, compiled by the Mississippi House of Representatives staff, Hancock County representatives are J. P. Compretta and Kirk Dedeaux.

EDUCATION

Significant advances in education have been made in recent years including creation of the Education Enhancement Fund, full funding of health insurance for teachers, measures aimed at reducing classroom violence, and the innovative Tech Prep program designed to combine higher academic standards with modern vocational training.

Education will get high priority again in 1997 with an increase in annual funding to be requested for public schools, universities and community colleges.

Salaries may be a key issue. Pay raises have been approved for teachers in three of the past four years, but Mississippi still trails the Southeastern region in average teacher salaries.

No raises were authorized in 1996, except for the yearly increment increases for teaching experience.

Legislative Budget Committee recommendations include $29.4 million to provide salary hikes averaging 3 percent for 31,700 public school teachers, teacher assistants and vo-tech instructors. It would be the first of three 3 percent raises over a three-year period.

The budget proposal also calls for $5.6 million for the first year of a three-year salary commitment at 3 percent a year for the community colleges, and $16.9 million for the first year of a three-year commitment at 3 percent a year for the universities.

Other funding recommendations include $14.5 million for 22 additional Tech Prep sites, $4.6 million to bring salaries of community college employees to the mid-point between public schools and universities, and $15 million to provide endowments of $5 million each for the three historically black universities in keeping with a federal court ruling in the Ayers desegregation case.

Apart from the proposed pay raises, the Legislative Budget Committee has recommended $1.041 billion for the Minimum Education Program, including $978.3 million in General Fund and $62.8 million in state bonds.

$168.7 million from other sources.

In addition to Budget Committee proposals, it is anticipated that lawmakers will take a close look at the education recommendations submitted by the Governor, the State Board of Education, the Institutions of Higher Learning and the community colleges.

Lawmakers also may be looking at such wide-ranging matters as whether new legislation is needed to deal with a long-standing dispute over school funding following municipal annexation; proposals involving child care at school facilities; and revisions in laws on medical insurance for retired educators.

A legislative agenda adopted by the State Board of Education includes higher teacher salaries, increased funding for Tech Prep, incentive scholarships for teachers to ease teacher shortages in both geographical areas and subject-matter areas, appointive school superintendents, stronger qualifications for local school board members, revisions in teacher certification laws, "homer rule" authority for outstanding school districts, and funds to implement a grant program to help prevent school violence.

TAX CUTS/MARRIAGE PENALTY

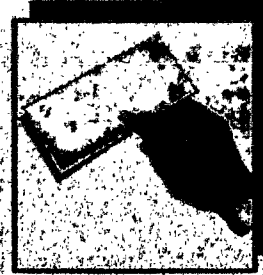

A concerted effort is expected to be made in 1997 to revise state income tax laws by boosting the exemption claimed by a married couple from $9,500 to $12,000 over a three-year period, doing away with the so-called "marriage penalty" under existing law.

Now, two single persons living together may claim an exemption of $6,000 each or a total of $12,000, which is $2,500 more than the married couple.

The proposed legislation is a revamped version of a tax reduction plan advocated by the Governor and others in 1995 and 1996. It also would make other changes in present laws, including a phased-in increase in the standard deduction for a married couple may receive for dependent children.

Similar bills have been introduced in the past two years but failed to win passage.

The new legislation also recommended by the Legislative Budget Committee calls for a $1 million increase in the standard deduction for a married couple may receive for dependent children.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

This is the nineties!

Dear Editor:

Without a doubt that is the most used, most abused and often the most hated phrase ever conceived.

Those who espouse such diatribe must think no other decade ever mattered. In fact, they act like teens and X's invented love and sex, beer and fun, fast boats and autos, everything which might indicate "have a good time and no fear."

Well, that just ain't so! Oh, today's young people for sure have more freedom and money than their parents, some more drugs, sex and AIDS. Others are smart-mouth, foul-language addicts who drive cars like every minute is a race . . . to heaven or hell perhaps.

The truth is every decade has had its rebels, wild dances, fast cars and booze. Since WW I, the 20's had Prohibition, but also its bathtub gin and homebrew, wild dances and hot jazz. That continued into the 30's till the Great Depression set in while Prohibition ended and the Mafia tried to go legit.

Come the 40's and WW II, our young men went into the military, rationing of certain foods and gasoline made the U.S. a more somber place, and Big Band swing music was all the rage for the Jitterbug crowd. Rosie the Riveter was born.

That signaled the start of Women's Lib and the end to centuries of male domination.

The 50's saw more and more families where both husband and wife had jobs away from home, latch key kids, the birth of Rock & Roll and the Twist. Pot was catching on with hard drugs to follow. Yes, the 50's sounded the death knell for family life as depicted on the big and little screens of entertainment.

This led to youthful rebellion in the 60's, the invasion of the Beatles, hard drugs and "free love," long hair and short skirts, unwed mothers with unwanted babies with welfare "fatherless" families.

Yeah, baby, the 70's began hard rock and even harder drugs; the realization that Baby Boomers who didn't trust anyone over 30 wanted to rule the world — on a high, of course.

And with the 80's came AIDS, the drive for "safe sex" and opening of the flood gates to one-parent illegitimate children. The personal computer became popular and the Internet was born.

Here we are, "this is the 90's" . . . what's so great about it? Only history will tell.

Regards,
Royce P. Kaupp
Waveland

Legislation also may be considered to further strengthen the innovative Workforce Education Program established in 1994, including additional funding for operation of the local one-step career centers.

GOVERNOR'S 1997 PROPOSALS

Additional funds to combat illegal drugs, eliminating the marriage penalty, and workforce training vouchers have been listed by Gov. Fordice as some of the top items in his 1997 legislative program. Additional proposals may be unveiled later.

The Governor's recommendations are expected to receive careful consideration by lawmakers, although which items have the best chance for passage remains a matter of conjecture.

The Governor's budget recommendations were prepared prior to his highway accident and released in November. They include a supplemental $5.2 million appropriation to augment drug interdiction efforts and $24.5 million to enhance a teacher Career Ladder plan to reward outstanding teachers.

He advocates eliminating the marriage penalty in the state income tax law, implementation of the Variable Compensation Plan to "target starting and maximum salaries for state employees" in line with contiguous states and the private sector; and workforce training vouchers for employees of industrial and non-industrial service industries.

The governor also has proposed $50,000 in planning grants for a charter schools program designed to serve as a pilot for "restructuring and renewing" education in the state.

Test stands

Several test stands at NASA's Stennis Space Center would require modification if the complex is selected for single and multiple test-firing rockets using a variety of fuels. NASA officials say noise and air pollution would be similar or less than conditions created in the 1960s when Stennis tested engines for the Apollo program. (Sketch courtesy of Stennis Space Center) center for propulsion testing by NASA last May, is competing with Huntsville's Marshall Space Flight Center and Phillips Laboratory located at Edwards Air Force Base in California for single and multiple engine testing.

He said Stennis is the only site under consideration for testing of multiple large engines. He said Stennis has a distinct advantage over the other facilities because the buffer zone surrounding the space

ARLENE C. TRAHAN
Arlene Carver Trahan, 60, of Gulfport, died Wednesday, Dec. 11, 1996, in Gulfport.

Mrs. Trahan was born in Bay St. Louis and was a lifelong resident of Gulfport. She was a graduate of Gulfport High School and a retired nurse formally employed with the Woman's Clinic of Gulfport. She was a member of St. James Catholic Church.

Mrs. Trahan was preceded in death by her parents, Mr. Sylvian S. and Mrs. Bessie Payne Carver; and a sister, Dorothy Parker.

She is survived by her husband, LeRoy J. Trahan of Gulfport; a daughter, Melissa Trahan of Gulfport; a son, Randy Bradley of Ocean Springs; and a brother, Sylvian "Sammy" Carver of Gulfport; a grandson, Drew Bradley; and her stepchildren Lee, Kevin and Lance Trahan, all of Gulfport; and Michele Odom of Gulfport.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated Friday at St. James Catholic Church in Gulfport. Burial was in Biloxi National Cemetery. Richmond Funeral Home in Biloxi was in charge of arrangements.

BEATRICE WILLIAMS
Mrs. Beatrice Williams, 90, of Biloxi, died Saturday, Dec. 7, 1996, in Ocean Springs.

Mrs. Williams was a native of Pass Christian. She was a member of First Missionary Baptist Church in Biloxi, where she was a member of the Senior Choir. She was a past member of Blue Sapphire Social Club, Gulf Coast Temple 471, treasurer, trustee, Assistance Daughter Ruler — Amelia Boudreaux Council IBPOE of W. She was the owner of B & W Toggery on Main Street in Biloxi and also was employed at Bitters and Rosenblum Robinson Women Apparel for many years.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Dock and Alice Butler; and her husband, Theodore Roosevelt Williams.

Survivors include a godchild, Emmanuel Freeman of Los Angeles; and she was cared for by two devoted friends, Mrs. Willie Mae Jackson of Hattiesburg and Mrs. Almatine Abston of Ocean Springs.

Services were conducted Friday at First Missionary Baptist Church. Burial was in Biloxi Cemetery. Richmond Funeral Home in Biloxi was in charge of arrangements.

Magee said comprehensive evaluations show test firings would create "moderate" impacts on air quality and noise, but the duration would be shortlived and produce "no significant impact" on structures, habitat or water quality. Noise and emissions will be no greater than conditions created in the 1960s when engines for the Apollo program were tested at Stennis, Magee said.

Magee said there is some potential risk from the liquid hydrogen and low-sulfur kerosene that would be trucked into and stored for some rocket testing, but Stennis has firefighters and the equipment to handle an emergency situation, and firefighting techniques would be refined and upgraded.

Most of the speakers supported Stennis and its impact on the local economy, but one asked NASA to return some of the private land in the buffer zone to its owners.

Local realtor Joey Manieri said he has made the request since 1994 to no avail.

Manieri also asked NASA to begin sharing more of its computer technology with local governments, especially with Hancock County.

Financial ties binding even after a divorce

Q. I have a problem with my credit record because my ex-husband has not fulfilled his responsibilities as outlined in our divorce agreement. We were divorced about a year ago. He agreed to pay several credit cards that were in both of our names. Now, he has fallen behind on payments and the credit card companies are calling me. Am I obligated to pay even though the divorce agreement says he is responsible?

A. Joint debts generated during a marriage are the responsibility of both spouses. A divorce settlement that stipulates who pays which debt is binding only on the couple filing for divorce. It does not change the original credit contract with your creditors.

Divorced couples frequently wish they had known to close credit accounts and sever the financial ties to their ex-spouse before the divorce. Often, there are not enough joint assets to pay off creditors and close accounts. Whether merely an oversight or a matter of necessity, your problem demonstrates a financial reality. The reality is that any financial tie to another person leaves you vulnerable to that person.

At this stage, you are left with few good alternatives. If the debts are not extensive and you have the resources, protect your credit record by making the credit card payments. If you pay the debts your ex agreed to pay, you must then try to recover the money from him.

If you don't have enough income to make the payments, it is doubtful that you will get much cooperation or sympathy from the creditor. However, do inform them of your situation and cooperate with them in trying to collect the bill. If all efforts to collect from your ex are exhausted, contact the local Consumer Credit Counseling office at 435-2227. This non-profit credit counseling service may be able to work out alternate payment arrangements for you.

In some severe circumstances, creditors sue or attempt to garnish wages. If these actions would jeopardize your job or your ability to provide for your family, you need legal advice on protecting wages or assets.

Unmanageable debts drive some divorcing couples to bankruptcy. As long as they are still married, couples can file bankruptcy jointly. Once divorced, either or both of you can file bankruptcy separately. If one individual files and the other does not, the nonfiling spouse is still responsible for the debt. Consult an attorney on what a bankruptcy can and cannot do to help your situation.

Q. I received a letter on a delinquent bill indicating that if I do not pay that bill, it will be turned into the IRS as income and I will have to pay taxes on the amount. Can a creditor do this?

A. Yes, creditors can report some unpaid debts to the IRS as income to the debtor. This provision is spelled out in the federal tax code, Section 61(a)(12). The worthless or uncollectable debt is charged off as a deduction for the creditor and becomes income for you.

Robinson elected chairman of Public Education Forum

E. B. "Bud" Robinson, chief executive officer of Deposit Guaranty National Bank, has been elected chairman of the Public Education Forum of Mississippi.

The forum was established in 1989 as an avenue for business involvement in state and local efforts to create a world-class educational system in the state. The forum combines the non-partisan leadership-resources of more than 100 businesses, governmental and educational organizations from across Mississippi, focusing its attention on education-related policy and coalition building. The organization is governed by a board of directors and an executive committee.

"Nothing is more important than the education of the next generation," Robinson said. "The forum is trying to address issues and items which will make a difference in the quality of education for our students. One of the major issues that needs to be addressed by all citizens is providing the resources for professional development of our teachers and for competitive salaries," Robinson added. Other executive committee officers elected at the recent meeting of the forum include Den Knecht of Ingalls Shipbuilding in Pascagoula as vice-chairman, Frank R. Day of Trustmark Corporation in Jackson as treasurer, and Howard Catchings of Catchings Insurance Agency in Jackson as Secretary.

As chairman, Robinson succeeds Charles O. Dunn, president and CEO of Mississippi Chemical Corporation in Yazoo City, who will remain on the executive committee. Newly elected executive committee members include Chancellor Robert Khayat of the University of Mississippi, Aubrey Patterson of Bank of Mississippi, Sharon Petty of Ameristar Casino-Vicksburg, and Richard Hale of Blue Cross/Blue Shield of Mississippi.

Other members of the executive committee include Kelly Allgood of BellSouth, Martha C. Coke of School Book Supply Company, Phyllis Eiland of Weyerhaeuser Company, Dwight Evans of Mississippi Power Company, Matthew L. Holleman III of Mississippi Valley Gas Company, Donald Meiners of Entergy, Dr. Barry Mellinger of Mississippi Gulf Coast Community College, Lou Ann Poynter of Magnolia Federal Bank, Hobson Waits of Electric Power Association of Mississippi, Don Waller of Farm Bureau Federation, W. David Watkins of the law firm of Adams and Reese, Dr. Tom Burnham of the State Department of Education, Dr. Olon Ray of the Mississippi Board for Community and Junior Colleges and Dr. Thomas Layzell of the Institutions of Higher Learning.

The election of the executive committee officers and new members followed the forum's third annual Legislative Forum. More than 200 education, government and business leaders from across the state participated in the event, designed to provide an opportunity for educational advocates and governmental leaders to share their legislative plans, ensure open communication around critical issues, and promote sustained emphasis on addressing these issues for the upcoming legislative session.

"The agenda brought attention to two issues of importance for the state including the pending shortage of educators in the future and the impact of technology in the classroom," said Dr. Don Cotten, executive director of the Public Education Forum of Mississippi.

"Our leadership continues to study these issues and take action as necessary," Cotten added.

Among those addressing the Legislative Forum were Lt. Gov. Ronnie Musgrove, Rep. Billy McCoy, chairman of the House Education Committee; Sen. Grey Ferris, chairman of the Senate Education Committee; Rep. Charles Young, chairman of the House Committee on Colleges and Universities; and Rep. Mike Cheney, member of the House Education Committee.

Avoid these common investing mistakes

Napoleon Bonaparte advised never to interrupt an enemy while he is making a mistake. The reverse, then, should be to caution a friend in error.

Author Jonathan Pond does just that in "the New Century Family Money Book." The book includes the most common investment mistakes of retirees and how to avoid them. Most of these mistakes and their solutions have been discussed in this column. Their importance, however, deserves another look.

Selling too soon. Pond says that investors over age 50 are more inclined to sell too quickly because they feel they can't afford to take any risks. Many investments fluctuate in value, but a decline is not always a reason to sell. Rather than selling an investment, ask yourself if, knowing what you know now, you would still buy this stock today. If so, you may be better off not only holding onto the investment but also taking the opportunity to buy more at a bargain price.

Shuffling investments unnecessarily. Retirees often sell solid long-term growth investments and reposition assets in those offering fixed income. As long as there is inflation, there is a need for growth.

Buying the wrong annuity. This robs many retirees of precious income. A pure annuity offered by most insurance companies takes a lump-sum investment and guarantees the purchaser, or annuitant, a lifetime income. The amount of income is determined by the amount of the deposit and the age of the annuitant.

People often buy annuities with guaranteed monthly lifetime distributions. A better approach is to look around for the best annuity with the best rates. Don't rush this decision. Insurance companies and the annuities they offer are not all alike.

Forgetting about taxes. Many retirees immediately begin withdrawing from their tax-sheltered retirement accounts when other taxable money is available. Leaving funds to grow tax-deferred makes more sense than paying taxes on your withdrawal as well as your unsheltered income.

Ignoring inflation. This is probably the biggest investment mistake. For retirees who live on the income from their investments, growth investments are still important. They're the only way to stay ahead of inflation. Ask your financial professional to show you several examples of blue-chip stocks or mutual funds that have consistent records of raising dividend payments. Typically, you will find that these investments not only have a history of increasing dividends but also of growing principal. Increasing income and growth of principal are both necessary to keeping up with the rising cost of living.

There are no guarantees in investing, but avoiding these easy mistakes will increase your chances for success.

Casino Magic announces permanent facility opening in Bossier City, La.

Casino Magic Corp. (Nasdaq: CMAG) Monday announced that its Bossier City, La. permanent casino facility will be ready to open Dec. 23.

The permanent facility will include 1,550 covered car parking garage and a 37,000 square foot entertainment pavilion which includes, among other features, a buffet, fine dining restaurant and a show lounge.

"We are very excited about the scheduled opening for the new permanent facility in Bossier City," said Ed Ernst, president and CEO. "The new facility will position Casino Magic to attract Texas customers at the levels other competitors in the market are presently enjoying."

Also the new facility is out of the Red River flood plain for all river levels. High water has caused the casino to be shut down at our temporary location for eight days in November, including the Thanksgiving holiday weekend. At the new permanent site, high water should not pose a problem in the future.

Casino Magic-Bossier City has generated $9.6 million in gaming revenue since its temporary opening Oct. 4 through Nov. 30 in spite of only being open for 22 days in November.

"We are satisfied with the temporary results as high water is an occurrence you just can't control," Ernest said.

Casino Magic Corp., with principal offices in Bay St. Louis, operates gaming casinos in Bay St. Louis and Biloxi, Bossier City, Neuenquien City and San Martin de los Andes, Argentina.

Treutel joins security firm

Steve Treutel has joined Merrill Lynch, the nation's largest securities firm, as a financial advisor at its Biloxi Beach office in Biloxi.

Treutel was active in the banking industry for the past 15 years. Upon joining Merrill Lynch, he received intensive training in the suitability for various investors of the firm's wide range of products and services.

A native of Bay St. Louis, Treutel earned a bachelor's degree from Ole Miss and an MBA from the University of New Orleans. He is a director of the Coast Crime Commission, a volunteer with the Family Child Center and a member on his church's parish council.

"We're delighted to have a person of Steve's experience and reputation join Merrill Lynch," said Robert T. Kellelea, senior vice president.

With more than 600 offices in the United States, Merrill Lynch is an industry leader in providing planning-based investment, financial management and advisory services.

Investors entrust more than $800 billion of their assets to Merrill Lynch through a global network of dedicated financial consultants, business specialists and investment analysts.

Power company has new logo

Mississippi Power Company is changing its look with a new logo, featuring bolder type and new corporate colors.

The new logo includes the company's familiar triangle with an imbedded lightning bolt in red accompanied by gray type. The logo it replaces has been used by the company for 20 years.

"This new logo represents our commitment to combine our traditional identity with an image that reflects continuing growth and change in our industry," said Dwight Evans, Mississippi Power's president and chief executive officer. "The new logo's design reflects our commitment to customers and to Mississippi's future."

The company will adopt the new look immediately, but its name, organization and customers service operations will not change. The other companies that are part of Southern Company, Mississippi Power's parent firm, are also adopting the new logo.

"In the short term, customers may see both new and old logos on signs and company vehicles as we make the transition," said Patrick Wylie, company spokesman.

"We are implementing the changes as rapidly and economically as makes good business sense."

Mississippi Power Company serves 186,000 customers in 23 counties in southeast Mississippi. Southern Company, which includes Mississippi Power, Alabama Power, Georgia Power, Gulf Power and Savannah Electric, serves nearly four million customers and is the largest producer of electricity in the United States.

Barber

On the subject of Kingston's current price of $5, Colson cracked. "He (Kingston) will give you two haircuts for the price of one, as long as you get them both at the same time."

Laughter went up in the shop and Killmar added, "If you're bald headed, it's still $5."

Originally from Bay St. Louis, Kingston worked in New Orleans where he received his barber's license before moving back to Bay St. Louis and opening the shop.

"I got my barber's license on February 30, 1939," Kingston said. "I was so happy I came home and got my marriage license."

He has been married for almost 50 years to Doris Mae Kingston and the couple have five children, including Waveland Alderman Al Kingston, Jr.

"I take care of my young bride," Kingston said. "She has social security and Medicare now, I can't turn her loose."

There have been a lot of changes in Bay St. Louis over the past 50 years.

The area where the barber shop is located used to house a drug store and an ice house and Kingston said people used to stand in line at the Depot across the street to go to New Orleans.

"It (Bay St. Louis) is all together a different place today," he said. "There is plenty of work here if people want it."

The shop itself has not changed much over the past 50 years, even having weathered Hurricane Camille.

While waiting for a haircut customers can browse through the fishing equipment Kingston sells or even buy a fishing license.

A few things inside the shop have changed over the years, however.

Kingston no longer uses the original hand clippers, although his style is the same.

The technique may be old, but it remains popular with the younger crowd.

"I've seen a lot of football teams come in," Kingston said. "I'm the only old-time barber around."

The number of customers he sees depends on the time of year and when the payroll comes out, says Kingston, with holiday time being a bit busy.

When asked what he does on his time off, Kingston says with a laugh that he rests.

It doesn't seem he'd have it any other way.

"I wouldn't do anything else," he said. "I'll probably keep working until I can't do it anymore."

and a group of Waveland businesswomen first discussed the idea of a carnival krewe parading in Waveland. Neireids was founded, and has grown to a membership of nearly 200. The annual ball is held at the Mississippi Gulf Coast Coliseum.

Jesse Bennet, Miss Hancock County Chamber of Commerce was also recognized. She is currently completing her first semester at the Jeff Davis campus of Gulf Coast Community College, where she is studying marketing.

Additionally, Prima Plauche, director of the Hancock County Library, was presented the Community Pride Award.

Citizen of the Year

Elaine Colson received the Citizen of the Year award at the Hancock County Chamber of Commerce banquet on Friday night at Our Lady of the Gulf Community Center. Colson is a Waveland businesswoman and one of the originators and the captain of the Krewe of Neireids in Waveland. "No carnival captain ever inspired greater loyalty and service from her krewe members, pushed them harder, or served them better than Elaine Colson. And no one can keep a secret better than Elaine Colson. If you don't believe me, try to get her to tell you who is queen of Neireids this year," said incoming Chamber president Dr. Frank Conaway. Women put best foot forward to reduce heart disease

If brisk walking is a woman's sole source of exercise, she's getting off on the right foot.

That's the message in a new study presented by Boston researchers recently in New Orleans at the American Heart Association's 69th Scientific Sessions. They reported that women who walked at least three hours per week had a 40 percent lower risk of heart attack and stroke than sedentary women. Those who walked at a brisk pace had greater risk reduction.

These findings have important public health implications because walking is the most common exercise reported by women, said JoAnn Manson, MD, Dr.PH, co-director of women's health at Brigham and Women's Hospital, and associate professor of medicine at Harvard Medical School.

Most studies of physical activity and cardiovascular disease have been conducted in men, Manson noted.

"Only about seven of the more than 40 epidemiologic studies on exercise have included women, and most of these studies have not specifically addressed walking."

Manson and her colleagues studied 84,000 female nurses aged 40 to 65 and with no evidence of heart disease when the investigation began in 1986. The participants responded to questionnaires that had questions about the duration, frequency and speed of walking. The information was updated twice during the next eight years.

"In the Nurses' Health Study, nearly 50 percent of the women participating exercised only by walking," Manson said. About 10 percent reported no physical activity at all, showing that the couch-potato syndrome extends even to this health-savvy population of registered nurses, she added.

During the eight years of this phase of the ongoing study of women's health, the women had 590 heart attacks and 456 strokes.

The researchers divided the women into five groups based on activity levels and controlled statistically for such factors as age, smoking, parental history of heart attack, menopausal status, hormone use, alcohol consumption and non-walking energy expenditure.

"What was particularly interesting was that when we looked at the effect of pace, the women who reported a brisk (at least 3 miles/hour) or very brisk (at least 4 miles/hour) striding pace had a 54 percent lower risk of cardiovascular disease," she explained. Women who had a slower pace had a 32 percent reduction compared to women who did not walk at all.

The scientists found comparable risk reductions for stroke, suggesting that brisk walking can reduce the risk of stroke as well as heart attack in women.

"This is especially significant because there have been so few studies of exercise in preventing stroke in women," she noted. According to the American Heart Association, stroke is the third leading cause of death for American men and women, and the leading cause of serious long-term disability.

The study also is important in light of recent federal exercise guidelines that recommend 30 minutes a day of moderate-intensity exercise, such as brisk walking, cycling or swimming, she said. The American Heart Association also recommends low-intensity activities for people who are unable to exercise more vigorously or who are sedentary. Such activities include walking for pleasure, gardening and yard work, house work and prescribed home exercise. The AHA upgraded lack of physical activity to the status of heart-disease risk factor in 1992.

For people who have been chronically sedentary, walking is more feasible and often safer than more vigorous forms of exercise, Manson said. It is accessible, enjoyable and readily adopted by nearly everyone.

"Exercise favorably impacts nearly every other heart disease risk factor," Manson said. "It lowers blood pressure, improves the cholesterol profile, lowers body weight, improves insulin sensitivity and lowers blood sugar, and lowers the risk of developing diabetes. It also lowers the risk of the bone-thinning disease osteoporosis and may lower the risk of certain kinds of cancer. And for many people, it helps in reducing stress."

Although additional cardiovascular benefits can be achieved with more vigorous exercise, Manson continued, the greatest public health benefit comes from going to moderate activity from a sedentary lifestyle.

Staying healthy amid the holidays

Amid the hustle and bustle of the holiday season, you probably haven't put "stay healthy" on your things-to-do list. Yet good health is the basis for enjoying this busy time.

"It's easy to let other things crowd out our priorities for healthy living," said Anna Reece, a representative of TOPS (Take Off Pounds Sensibly).

"When a schedule is overburdened, it's tempting simply to skip exercise that day, or when we face a round of holiday parties and dinners, it's easy to overdo it with food and treats."

The secret to enjoying the holidays without losing your perspective on healthy living involves following three simple guidelines: prioritize, plan and pamper," Reece said.

1. Prioritize: Choose what's really important to you. For instance, you may get invited to a dozen parties, but you needn't attend every one. Overscheduling only encourages stress.

You must place priorities on what you eat, too. Be choosy. You can indulge in seasonal treats without gaining weight if you work them into your meal plan and eat selectively.

2. Plan: This is no time to "wing it" when scheduling meals and exercise. Stick to routine as much as possible; it's one less thing you'll have to think about. And you'll feel much better if your health needs are cared for on a regular basis.

2. Pamper: At this time of year, pampering yourself might mean the gift of an hour's solitude for a nap or a relaxing bath. Carve out time for a mini-vacation like this by negotiating with your spouse, another family member, a friend or a neighbor. Trade chores or favors: if you're both parents, one watches all the kids while the other takes an hour off—then vice versa when the first one

At any time of year, supportive companions make it easier to stick to a healthy routine. You'll find such companions in your local TOPS chapter, where members meet weekly to encourage each other toward their goals of weight loss and maintenance.

Information on TOPS membership is available by calling Anna Reece (601) 875-2783 or toll-free at 1-800-932-8677.

Locations needed
for guide

The Mississippi Department of Wildlife, Fisheries and Parks needs assistance locating areas suitable for viewing nature and is asking state residents to nominate locations to be included in the Mississippi Wildlife Viewing Guide.

Residents who choose a site that is included in the viewing guide being published by the department will receive a complimentary copy. Nomination forms are available from the Jackson office by calling 1-800-GO-PARKS.

The viewing guide will showcase 80 or more of Mississippi's best wildlife and nature viewing areas providing a brief narrative of the surrounding habitat and what wildlife can possibly be seen at that location. Each location will have an information kiosk, and trail signs will be at each site.

Private contributors and state and federal grants have provided funding for the viewing guide. The contributors and grantors are MTEL, the International Paper Foundation, the Walker Conservation Foundation, the Pearl River Valley Water Supply District, the Mississippi Department of Economic and Community Development Division of Tourism, the Bureau of Land Management, Natchez National Historical Park, Gulf Island National Seashore, the U.S. Forest Service, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Mississippi Forestry Commission.

The "WORD" for the Week

Dennis J. Prutow, Box 303, Sterling, KS 67579

"When the fullness of time came, God sent forth His Son, born of a woman" (Galatians 4:4). What does this mean? First, God sent His Son into the world by way of being born. The common thing which took place was the birth of a child. But something uncommon also took place. The child who was born was the divine Son of God.

Second, God sent His Son into the world by way of being "born of a woman." By coming into the world through the womb of a woman, the Son of God took to Himself a human nature. The common thing which took place was that the Son of God, like every other child, received His human nature in His mother's womb. But something uncommon also took place. His human nature was not derived from both a man and a woman. It was derived only from a woman.

Therefore, Jesus Christ was and is absolutely unique. This Jesus had a true human nature. But He also had a true divine nature.

Christmas is God's Son born of a woman

The Coming of Winter

The four seasons of the year are all special in their own way. Of the four seasons, winter seems to be the one that many people try to get away from. We have some friends (affectionately called "snow birds"), who move to a warmer climate during the winter months for health reasons or just to get away from the elements. Then there are others who really look forward to the winter months to participate in the various sports; however, you don't have to be a skier or ice skater to enjoy winter. The different season should be like a fine restaurant's menu, where variety is enjoyed at different times. Each season that God gives us has its own beauty and wondrous ways. The first snowfall in the winter is always exciting, and everything is so clean when covered with a coating of snow. A cozy home, a hot drink, a warm sweater, and loved ones, add a special touch to winter that cannot be felt at any other time of the year. The Bible tells us to thank God for everything. We thank him for the different seasons of the year that He has created.

Thou hast set all the borders of the earth;
thou hast made summer and winter.
—LIV Psalm 74:17

Prayer to the Blessed Virgin

(Never Known to Fail)

OH MOST BEAUTIFUL FLOWER of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine, splendor of Heaven, Blessed Mother of the Son of God, Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh Star of the Sea, help me and show me how you are my mother.
Oh Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth, I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in my necessity (make request).
There are none that can with-stand your power, O Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times).
Holy Mary, place this prayer in your hands (three times).
Say this prayer for three consecutive days.
Grateful thanks.

12B-THIS SEA COAST ECHO-SUNDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1996

Bird program featured today at Davis Bayou

Special guests will give today's free program at Gulf Island's National Seashore. Wildlife education specialist, Allison Sharpe, presents "Birds of a Feather" at 2 p.m. in the Davis Bayou Visitor Center. Joining Sharpe are both a red-tailed hawk and a great horned owl. Together they'll help reveal the every-day secrets of how birds hunt, fly and survive in the wild.

Sharpe, who regularly instructs students at the Gulf Coast Research Laboratory's J. L. Scott Marine Education Center, is also very active in wildlife rehabilitation. Along with talking about what birds do for a living, she and her feathered associates show the difficulties of birds surviving broken wings and other serious injuries. The entire program is about one hour long and open to anyone interested in birds here on the Coast.

If you've never seen a red-tailed hawk up close, don't understand how birds really fly, or even want to know more about the possible dinosaur-bird connection, join Birds of a Feather this afternoon at 2 p.m. "Secrets in the Winter Sky" is the theme for all December's free programs at Gulf Islands National Seashore. Davis Bayou and the William M. Colmer Visitor Center is located off Hwy. 90 East in Ocean Springs. For information concerning Birds of a Feather or other December programs, call (601) 875-9057.

'Symphony of Animals' on display at museum

A new exhibit, "A Symphony of Animals," is on display at the Walter Anderson Museum of Art. The exhibit, featuring over 165 works by Anderson, illustrates the fascinating, spiritual connection and humor he found in the world of animals.

"A Symphony of Animals" features watercolors, line drawings, ceramics and wood carvings of an amazing array of creatures, including some literary and mythical characters. Most of the pieces in this exhibition are from the Anderson family's collection, and almost none have been shown until now.

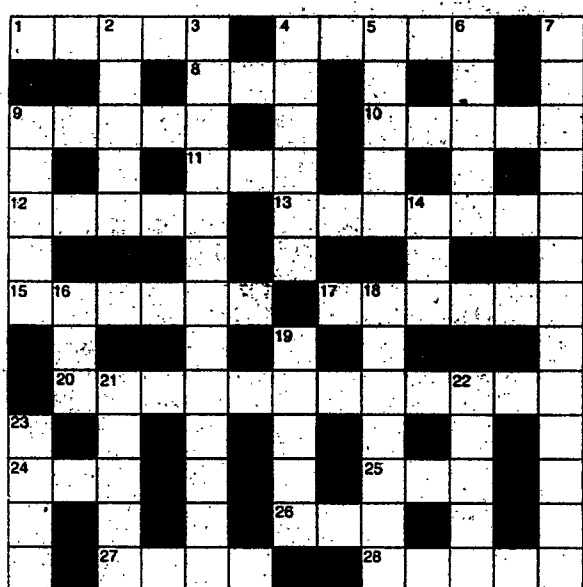

The works span Anderson's entire career; in fact, the exhibit divides the works into Anderson's three distinctive artistic periods.

"One of the most interesting components of this exhibition is the change we see in how Anderson related to animals throughout his life," said Joey Rice, curator for the Walter Anderson Museum of Art.

"The early years generated a very classical, academic body of animal art that is beautifully and realistically rendered, the art of an observer. Yet as we move through the years of Anderson's career, we can note a change in perspective to that of an accepted participant. His later work reflects his desire to become an element of the natural world, to 'realize' and therefore become one with his subjects." One section of the exhibition focuses on some of these intimate encounters, including portraits of animals whose eyes seem to reach directly into the viewer.

The exhibit will be on display through Feb. 23. Museum operations are supported in part by a grant from the Mississippi Arts Commission, a state agency.
